

Youth on the Move

Millenaris Park, Budapest
08-09/10/2010
Programme

The Youth on the Move initiative of the European Union aims at improving access of young people to education, skills and experiences, including international mobility, in order to enhance their chances of getting a first job

Youth on the Move means:

improved quality and attractiveness of higher education in Europe
higher levels of qualifications and skills more opportunities to learn and get training abroad better job prospects for young people

The Youth on the Move event in Budapest held at the Millenáris Teatrum in Budapest is organised by the European Commission together with Hungarian partners: the Budapest Municipality, Mobilitás and Tempus Public Foundation.

Teátrum: Hall

The Forum

The central area of the event is the Forum, which is on the ground floor of the Teatrum building.

Here is the place where all four topics of the event have their separate areas. This is the meeting point of young people, this is where most of the lectures, debates presentations and conversations take place. This is where information about the participating institutions and associations can be found, along with information about scholarships, job opportunities, and services related to mobility.

The Movie Corner on the mezzanine will screen short movies related to mobility projects, short documentaries and films sponsored by international projects.

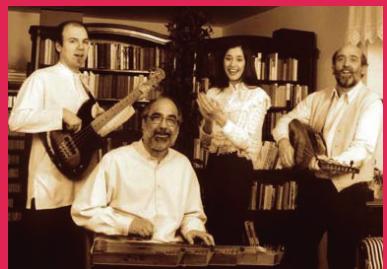

The mezzanine will host the Babel, the place for learning languages. This is where the national institutes for culture based in Hungary present themselves, such as the Goethe Institut, the Instituto Cervantes, the British Council, and many others, with games and thematic programmes.

A part of this section is the European Guide to Mobility, where you can chat with peers about practical issues related to mobility, and other, less materialistic issues.

The Babel will give free language exam samples as well.

Concerts

Hungarian actress, graduated from the Budapest Academy of Drama and Film, joined the legendary Kaposvár Theater, where she played leading roles with Hungary's most renowned stage directors. At the age of 22 she also starred at the film adaptation of an Esterhazy novel entitled School of Senses. After a minor role in Rolf Schübel's acclaimed film Gloomy Sunday, she decided to shift her focus from theater to film and from Hungary to Germany.

There she starred in Schübel's Collapse, Robert Pejo's Dallas Pashamende.

She was awarded Best Actress in Festroia 2005 (Portugal) and the Soci Festival (Russia) at the Hungarian Film Week 2005 and got the European Shooting Star Award 2005, Berlinale.

Recent Film work includes The Boneman (Wolfgang Murnberger), The Camerakiller (Robert Pejo) and Soul Kitchen by Fatih Akin. Dorka is also a singer, member of the Gryllus Quartett, and the international Rotfront band.

She is a mobility symbol at the Hungarian artist scene.
